APPLICATION

TELEPHONE EXCHANGE We begin a new series in which we look in detail at communication via modems. In this first instalment we discuss baud rates, modems and international data connection standards

901

HARDWARE

IN CAMERA The modern generation of cameras is equipped with microprocessors that take care of many of the technical details required to take a good photograph. We look closely at a number of models

909

SOFTWARE

START RIGHT In the first of a two-part series on educational software we discover the importance of good program design and clear objectives

906

COMPUTER SCIENCE

SPATIAL AWARENESS We continue our special projects in LOGO by investigating the creation of patterns and symmetrical designs

915

JARGON

K TO KEYPAD A weekly glossary of computing terms

908

PROGRAMMING PROJECTS

SCREEN ROUTINES We continue with our adventure game for the popular micros by learning how to design sample screens on the BBC Micro; in future instalments we will look at the Commodore 64 and Spectrum

904

MACHINE CODE

CHECK MATE We concentrate on the Commodore 64 this week and look at its VIC chip, a custom built chip that enables screens to be created and stored for future use

918

WORKSHOP

POWER SUPPLY Taking a short break from our robot project, we look at the vital role of servo motors in computer-controlled devices and suggest some novel applications

912

Next Week

● We take a look at the PC-1251 and PC-1500A — two pocket computers from Sharp.

● Continuing our examination of educational software, we examine the Macmillan series of Learn To Read packages for the ZX Spectrum.

● Communication between micros through the telephone network is becoming increasingly popular. We investigate how communication is achieved.

QUIZ

- 1) What kind of modem requires a telephone handset?
- 2) How much memory is contained on the chip used in the Canon T70?
- 3) Where would we need 'parity checking' and why?
- 4) What do we mean when we say that a procedure is state transparent?
